

Bad News?

Cell phones are ubiquitous in western society. As much as they are very useful tools, they are also an annoyance and sometimes the bringer of bad news. This sculpture is one of a body of work exploring the cell phone and the human experience.

In this sculpture, "Bad news?", the figure has just read a text or taken a phone call at work. The phone screen is black, so he has finished the message. The phone is being lowered as the knife is being raised. Both are at the same level. His face is contorted in an angry expression. I would not want to be the person he is thinking of right now.

By

Steven A. Benezue

Sbenezue@gmail.com